1. At a recent meeting of the Union Femenina del Uruguay (UFU), Communist Party Women's organization, called to elect a new directorate for the period 1950-51, Communist Senator Julia Arevalo de Roche stated that the immediate principal task of the UFU was to help the Communist Party obtain 10,000 women's signatures to a protest against the ratification of the United States-Uruguayan Trade Treaty.*
2. According to Arevalo, leader of the UFU, other objectives of the UFU would be to aid the "Pro-Peace" movement, to support Communist demands for a higher standard of living, and to demand better working conditions for Uruguayan women. Arevalo concluded by stating that the UFU was in difficult financial straits and that it was, therefore, imperative for each member to be active in selling the anniversary issue of the organization's magazine, Nosotros, in an effort to obtain operational funds.
3. The naming of the UFU officers was conducted in the usual Communist manner, with Arevalo personally choosing her assistants and the members of the group later approving her selections.
4. The 1950 UFU directorate, which contains virtually the same members as for the previous year, follows:

President: Julia Arevalo de Roche
